Some of the information in this brochure was compiled from leadership materials from the University of Texas at San Antonio and the University of Kansas.
EVALUATION:

Use evaluations a tool to determine the level of success reached and to increase the chances of success for future endeavors.

Evaluation Procedures:

- Examine expectations of members and advisors
  - Which (job responsibilities, commitments, etc.) were reached? Which were not? Were they realistic? What would be more realistic and reachable?

- Examine goals of the organization
  - Specific written goals—which were reached? Which were not? Were they realistic? What would be more realistic and reachable? Were there too many or too few? How will future goal development be approached?
  - Non-specific - What did the group accomplish this year? What did you attempt, but not complete? What did you want to do but did not get around to? Were these goals realistic? What would make the organization work better?

- Examine personal satisfaction of members
  - Personal goals - Did each member get what he/she needed/wanted?
  - How could group as a whole contribute to individual growth?
  - Why did your members get involved?
  - Did some members leave group? Why?
  - What is my personal commitment to organization?

- Examine success of projects:
  - Evaluate each program/project for successes, improvement, teamwork, attendance, participant comments, etc.

- Examine meeting structure:
  - Is the group meeting enough? too much? too long? too short?
  - Are members participating in decision-making processes?
  - Are meetings "comfortable" for sharing and feedback?
  - What do you like best about meetings? Like least about meetings?

Evaluation should:

- Identify the positive steps made
- Identify the areas which need to be strengthened (It should be constructive, non-judgmental and non-accusatory toward individuals)
- Provide each member the opportunity to offer feedback (anonymous)
- Be used in the development of suggestions for future directions

Above all, make the evaluation a POSITIVE experience surrounding the good things that were accomplished and addressing how things can be accomplished next year.
